Week in Review

The Senate adjourned on Thursday and the House will return Friday morning for a gavel-in, gavel-out session and to read in new bills. Neither chamber is expected to conduct any business on Monday except for procedural businesses so that lawmakers can stay in their districts for their local caucuses. As we close out the week, bills are starting to move through subcommittees, committees, and being prepared for debate on the floor. The Governor's biofuels bill passed the House this week (vote of 82-10), being the first bill debated on the floor this session. Discussions on the three tax reform bills also continued this week. The House and Senate tax reform proposals advanced in both chambers this week. The first funnel (February 18) is quickly approaching. All bills must be out of a committee in one of the two chambers in order to stay alive. Ways and Means and Appropriations bills are not subject to this deadline.

Governor Reynolds Ends COVID-19 Disaster Declaration

On Thursday, Governor Reynolds announced that she will allow the current disaster proclamation, that has been in place since March 17, 2020, to expire on February 15 at 11:59pm. Governor Reynolds was one of the first to announce a disaster proclamation in the early days of the pandemic. Reynolds said it's time to reallocate state resources that have been dedicated to treating COVID-19 as a public health emergency. "We cannot continue to suspend duly enacted laws and treat COVID-19 as a public health emergency indefinitely," Reynolds said in a statement. "After two years, it's no longer feasible or necessary. The flu and other infectious illnesses are part of our everyday lives, and coronavirus can be managed similarly." Read the press release here.

Bills on the Move

Tax Reform

- SSB3074: The Senate's tax reform plan which lowers personal income taxes and corporate taxes, makes changes to Research Activities tax credits and renewable biochemical tax credits, and funds the Natural Resources Trust Fund (IWILL constitutional amendment for water quality and outdoor recreation funding) passed out of a subcommittee and committee this week.
- HSB 626: The House moved its tax reform bill out of a Ways and Means subcommittee this week. The bill reduces the individual income tax rate to a flat 4 percent, like the Governor's plan (for tax year 2026) and exempts retirement income (like the Governor's plan) and some income for retired farmers. The House plan does not cut corporate tax rates.
- Both the House and Senate have used centerpieces of the Governor's tax proposal, establishing a flat 4 % tax on individual income tax payers and elimination of taxes on retirement income. Corporate tax reform and sales tax modernization will continue to be worked on as the two chambers move forward with the legislative process.
