COVID-19 Legislative Update

March 1, 2021

Supplemental V – The American Rescue Plan

Timeline/Process: Last Friday night, the House passed the American Rescue Plan by a vote of 219-212 with two Democrats, Rep. Kurt Schrader and Rep. Jared Golden, joining Republicans in voting no. The Senate plan to take up the bill as early as Tuesday afternoon, though it's likely to slip to Wednesday. The Senate will go through 20 hours of debate before moving to “voterama”, likely on Thursday or Friday. The Senate parliamentarian ruled last Thursday that the minimum wage provisions had merely incidental budgetary effects and thus are not germane under reconciliation rules. That portion of the bill will be removed in the Senate and require another vote in the House before moving to the President for his signature. The goal is to pass the bill before March 14, when unemployment insurance expires.

Politics: The rejection of the minimum wage piece by the Senate parliamentarian may be a blessing in disguise for Democrats. Multiple moderate Senate Democrats had voiced opposition to a wage increase, imperiling the bill's path in the Senate, while progressives in the House indicated that they might withhold votes if minimum wage was removed or decreased because of moderates' objections. With the parliamentarian's ruling, Democrats can blame the rules rather than certain members of their caucus. After the parliamentarian's ruling on Thursday, Senate Budget Committee Chair Bernie Sanders and Senate Finance Committee Chair Ron Wyden stated that they would be working on tax provisions to penalize large companies who pay low wages and incentivize small businesses to raise wages. However, over the weekend the tax proposal seemed to lose steam, as getting all 50 Democratic senators onboard with language to pass the bill within the necessary timeframe seemed unfeasible. The progressive push is not over yet, as 23 House progressives sent a letter to the administration today calling for them to overrule the parliamentarian and keep minimum wage in, pointing to precedent in the 1960s. This evening, Sen. Sanders indicated that he would be offering an amendment to raise the wage to raise the minimum wage to $15/hour.

Policy: We could see a range of changes in the Senate. The removal of the minimum wage provision is the most obvious, but we could see changes elsewhere – an additional month of unemployment insurance, changes in income eligibility for direct payments. Partial Senate text here – it is missing health sections and others that are still being drafted, scored, and ruled on by the parliamentarian. House-passed text here.
